The Daily Fun Hour

Holiday Forfeits

Here is another batch of forfeits to be imposed as penalties in various games during the holiday season:

First. The culprit is condemned to laugh in one corner of the room, sing in another corner, weep in another and dance in the fourth corner.

Second. To play parrot, going to each player in turn and asking, "If I were a parrot, what would you tell me to say?" Every player tries to think up some absurdity and tells it in a low tone, which the parrot is obliged to repeat in a higher key.

Third. The culprit is ordered to pay compliments to five of the other players in turn, in each case omitting a different vowel from his speech, using only words without "a" in the first compliment, words without "e" in the second, without "i" in the third, without "o" in the fourth and without "u" in the fifth compliment.

Fourth. To go to each player in turn and ask, "What object have you seen lately that attracted your attention?" and when the question is answered, "A monkey," "a clothes pin," "an alarm clock," to say solemnly each time, "It was I."

Fifth. To play dummy and do whatever is ordered by other players without uttering a syllable.

Sixth. To leave the room with two legs and come back with six. (This old trick is done by walking in with a chair.)

Seventh. To form an acrostic on a word given by a player, the words of the acrostic to describe the good or bad qualities of the player, and the initials to spell the given word, such as "behavior," the acrostic words for which may be either brilliant, exquisite, honorable, admirable, valiant, intelligent, open, righteous, or bitter, egotistic, hard, angry, vain, indolent, outlandish, ridiculous, the initials in either case forming the keyword, behavior.

THE HOME IN GOOD TASTE

By Harold Donaldson Eberlein
Joint Author of "Practical Book of Interior Decoration," Etc.

No. 72—Breakfast Room And Dining Room

Should a home admit of its presence, a breakfast room is most desirable. Here one may indulge a taste for brilliant color, both in drapery and gaily painted furniture. Many mornings are gray, and they should be enlivened by clear and warm color used in combination with simplicity of design.

One may have birds here, in delightful Chinese cages, goldfish darting about in a clear glass bowl in the sun, and growing ferns. These add a tonic to the morning outlook upon life.

The dining room may then be furnished in a more formal spirit—quiet walls, paneled in wood or treated with paint or even a good paper, must always from only a background for the group at the table.

ing tables and cabinets, should be very carefully balanced. A screen should mask the serving door of the room. The lighting should be sufficient, but not glaring. Fall sconces with shaded lights, supplemented by real candles on the table, form the ideal lighting arrangement.

If, however, a light above the table is desired, let it, by all means, be so placed, that, while lighting the table adequately it is shaded so as to screen the eyes of the diners. An electric light shining in one's eyes nullifies the pleasure in the best of dinners and the most beautiful of rooms.

New Chapter Opening In Economic History, British Expert Says

LONDON. (By Associated Press Mail).—"We are entering a new chapter in the economic history of the world, a period which will, I believe, surpass in the intensity of its development the wonderful forty-four years preceding the Great War," said Edgar Crammond, an English financial writer, recently in the course of a lecture on "The International Financial Situation" to members of the London Chamber of Commerce.

"This country is called upon to undertake tasks of reconciliation and reconstruction such as her broad shoulders have never carried before, and she is the one power organized and equipped to bring order out of the great chaos.

"Our two great duties must be," continued Mr. Crammond, "first, to secure the disarmament of Europe, and secondly, to solve the problem of reparations and inter-allied debts. Now that we have practically arranged for the payment of our debt to the United States, it might be possible to invite American co-operation with us in a policy of help and forbearance. To carry out these great tasks, it is essential that we have freedom from governmental control of the financial machinery of the country. The great joint stock banks, the Anglo-foreign banks, and the great British mercantile houses should now be allowed to exercise a greater influence in the shaping of our financial policy than they have enjoyed since August, 1914."

"If we can arrive at a friendly understanding with France," the speaker added, "re-unite the world into a single economic unit, and establish once again the international financial system, I, for one, look hopefully and with great confidence to the future. There is no finality to economic expansion, and viewed historically the great war is a part of the process of the economic evolution of the world. We have effected in four and a half years of war and four years of peace, progressive changes which would have taken perhaps two generations of peace to accomplish.

Today is celebrated as the anniversary of the birth of Christ because, in spite of the fact that there is no historical evidence that this event occurred on December 25, a majority of the churches during the fourth century held their feast on this day.

Robust Turk Comes Into The Limelight

LAUSANNE. — (By Associated Press Mail)—Djellaladine Arif Bey, representative of the Angora government at Rome and member of the Turkish delegation at the Near Eastern Conference, was president of the senate in Constantinople when the allied governments, under British leadership, closed up the Turkish parliament in 1919 and banished to Malta most of the nationalist leaders who had not joined Mustafa Kemal in Angora.

The British were after Djellaladine, but he was too clever for them. He was warned in advance and lay in hiding until he was able to make his way across the Bosphorus disguised as a peasant. Then he slowly worked his way across Anatolia to a point on the Angora railway which was beyond allied control.

Djellaladine Arif Bey is as large a man as Chief Justice Taft of the United States Supreme Court. His companion in flight was Halide Edib Hanum, the celebrated woman nationalist whom the English also wanted to send to Malta because of her effective agitation against the terms of the Sevres Treaty. Halide Edib Hanum is of slight, athletic build and found the night walks and horseback rides comparatively easy. But it was difficult to find horses strong enough to carry Djellaladine Arif Bey. The horses fell under his weight, and he was badly battered and bruised before he managed to reach a zone of safety.

In the three years and a half since that flight the Angora government has won recognition as the responsible government of Turkey; has defeated Greece, and has unseated the Sultan at Constantinople. So the refugees of 1919 are now returning to Europe under conditions far different from those under which they fled.
